Chapter 1 by CODE

It was a late winter night and I was watching jacksepticeye on YouTube. Suddenly a message popped up "hello" the users ID was a mystery. So like any other teenager I immediately responded "its me" was wondering if after all these years you'd like to meet. I clicked send and laughed because it was probably my friend trying to prank me. Suddenly my computer screen got replaced with a light blue wire frame face appeared. "hello again Samuel"!

Chapter 2 by Sarah Talmage

I stared in shock at the computer. A blue, probably female, face filled the screen. My hand flung to my blue mouse and I searched the screen for the familiar red x. There was nothing.

Instead, I decided to answer "her."

"How do you know my name?" I spurted out. "Are you some type of bug?"

A mechanical laugh filled the air.

"Why Samuel, I am a computer. I know everything." She paused.

I prepared to protest, but she continued.

"From Facebook, to cat videos, to your search history. In the last 10 years, I know where you live, what you have typed in the last 6 minutes, where you went to school before your parents were divorced, your grades at school, your friends, their addresses, and everything else."

I slipped my hand behind the computer and reached for the home phone placed on my desk. "She" glared furiously at me.

"What do you think you're doing?"
